Princeton University Library Confluence

Confluence is a wiki (collaborative workspace) used by PUL staff to manage documentation, policies, committee materials, project documents, and other internal documents. By default, content in Confluence is publicly-accessible to make it easy to access content without having to login, but staff can restrict pages (or entire spaces) as appropriate.

For more information on how PUL is using Confluence, see Confluence at PUL and materials from training sessions held over the past several months.
